Friendsville Town Council Officially Bans Fracking

The Friendsville Town Council voted 2-1 on a public hearing Tuesday afternoon to ban fracking on public and private lands within the town. The vote, taken in the Friendsville Community Hall, followed heartfelt testimony from a dozen speakers, all in favor of the moratorium. Councilman John McAllister made the motion and said the council is the first town in Allegany County to vote to ban fracking.

Friendsville Town Councilman Philip Moore said he was opposed to the ban because fracking has been conducted in the area and has not caused any problems. Moore said that he was concerned about the effect of the ban on the town’s economy and the loss of jobs.

However, Friendsville Town Councilman Jim Gray, who voted in favor of the ban, said the town has received numerous complaints from residents about the impact of fracking on their property values and health. Gray said that the ban is important to protect the health and safety of the town’s residents.

Gray also said that the ban will help to protect the environment and reduce the negative impact of fracking on the local community. He said that the ban will help to reduce air and water pollution, as well as the risk of groundwater contamination.

Gray also said that the ban will help to protect the local community’s health and safety from the impacts of fracking. He said that the ban will help to reduce the risk of cancer and other health problems associated with fracking.

Gray also said that the ban will help to protect the local community’s property values and economic viability. He said that the ban will help to reduce the negative impact of fracking on the local economy and the local community’s ability to attract new businesses.

Gray also said that the ban will help to protect the local community’s quality of life. He said that the ban will help to reduce the negative impact of fracking on the local community’s quality of life, such as noise, air pollution, and water quality.

Friendsville Town Councilman Elliott Miles said he voted in favor of the ban because he has witnessed the negative impact of fracking on his own property and on his neighbors’ properties. He said that he has seen land being destroyed, water quality being degraded, and severe health problems among his neighbors.

Miles also said that he has seen the economic impact of fracking on the local community. He said that the ban will help to protect the local community’s economic viability and attract new businesses.
